

A Darned Hot Winter

CZ: Forthcoming amendment to the law on criminal liability of legal entities

SK: Tightening of the conditions for granting consumer loans

EU: Monitoring employees' private messages

What a strange winter it has been. No sleighing with the kids. No cross-country or downhill skiing – not even my beloved snowboarding! No traffic calamities on only three centimetres of snow. This year's winter was among the hottest on record in the Czech Republic, and not only in terms of temperature... By now you've no doubt already completed your "first ever" VAT control report submission; perhaps you are planning a work shift on Good Friday (which is a new holiday) or are preparing for electronic record of sales. Higher temperatures for the rest of the year are also portended by broader corporate criminal liability, plans of the State Labour Inspection Office to check the provision of equal pay or the extensive amendments to the Labour Code penned by trade unionists.

But there are also much more pleasant reasons to break a sweat this year. By taking part in our April charitable run called Run and Help you will help disabled people via the Konto Bariéry foundation. We will then gladly welcome all participants, regardless of fitness level, to our newly expanded Prague office.

EU: Tightening the conditions for making a complaint to the European Court of Human Rights

From 1 January 2016, a new version of Rule 47 of the Rules of Procedure of the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg will come into effect, tightening the conditions for complaints. CZ: Confidentiality obligation in the private sphere

According to the ombudsperson, companies cannot arbitrarily order employees to maintain confidentiality about matters brought to their knowledge in the exercise of the profession. Mandatory confidentiality is determined for employees in the public sector, but in the private sector must be anchored in the employment contract or in an agreement between the employer and the employee. ## CZ: Forthcoming amendment to the law on criminal liability of legal entities

An amendment to the law on criminal liability of legal entities is currently being discussed in the Chamber of Deputies and may lead to big changes.

Among them is the extension of the enumerated grounds of crimes which can be committed by a legal entity from more than double the current 83 to 216. According to the constitutional committee's draft bill, the list of offences should be extended to include defamation (which is missing from the government bill), while the offence of infringement of competition rules should be excluded from the list. If the amendment is accepted, legal entities will only have six months to adapt their internal rules and procedures in order to reduce the risk of criminalising the activities of the legal entity. A prerequisite for exemption from the responsibility is proving that the legal entity has taken appropriate measures (e.g. internal regulations, training). Nevertheless, the legal entity may be exempted only for acts by their employees, not by the statutory or controlling persons. According to this amendment, however, legal entities should now be able to exempt themselves from liability if they made every effort that could be reasonably required to prevent the offence from being committed. Hence the need to take appropriate measures has increased even more.
